

thor A. Alexander, the son of Mrs. W. C. Alexander and the trusted grandson of Mrs. Columbus Alexander. He is connected with the firm of Thomas Fisher & Co., Inc. He has taken no part in the bitter family feud that has raged for twelve years, but has been himself aloof from the bickering of his kinsmen.

Great Dread of Banks.

Members of the Alexander family today explained the dread or aversion that the nonagenarian widow has regarding banks. They said that her husband lost $40,000 when the Cooke Bank failed in Washington years ago. She also is possessed with a fear, it is said, that money on deposit might be subject to checks of unscrupulous persons. Because of these fears the aged woman kept most of her money concealed in a tin box, which was hidden in various places in her home.

Typical of the mysterious manner in which the Alexander family handles its money is the fact that the house was the latest of the about $1,400 from the tin box. The money was placed in the box, which was locked, and the box in turn was locked in a bureau drawer. Both keys were placed in Mr. Hay's wallet. Three persons saw how the money was secured. Next morning only $200 was found in the box.

Tracing the Money.

In the investigation of this theft the detectives have visited the ticket offices to make inquiries about the departure of possible suspects from the city, and the kind of currency they carried. By tracing the money, although it is said it was not marked, the detectives hoped to fasten the guilt on persons under surveillance. There will be a further inquiry along this line, touching the bank accounts of persons involved in the investigation.

Illustrating how trusting and glibly has been Mrs. Columbus Alexander, certain relatives today remarked instances of where money was taken from her. On one occasion, it was related, that a woman had handed the old woman an envelope, telling her that it contained $500. Next morning the envelope, which had not been sealed, was opened, and it contained only $200.

On another occasion a relative had three $50 bills belonging to the aged woman, but on reaching her home explained that he dropped one in getting off a street car, and the other two were not a word of reproach was uttered by Mrs. Alexander, it is said.

Invalid For Years.

For many years aged Mrs. Alexander has been subject to constant care and attention at the hands of her relatives. She is an invalid, being unable to walk only by means of a crutch. Nevertheless, she is said to be patient and uncomplaining, always trying to smooth over the turbulent strife within her home, yet taking no side.

Since the old homestead, the "Dumbarton mansion," at 1529 Thirtieth street, Georgetown, was deserted by the family in October and the nonagenarian occupant took an apartment at the Fort Myer Hotel, Mrs. Alexander has been subjected to the family feud to a less degree than before, when the two hostile factions lived under the same roof. It has been due, it is understood, to the fact that the seven children of Mrs. Pendall Alexander, widow of one of the sons of Mrs. Columbus Alexander, have not visited her.

Sister Thomas, a colored maid, is now practically the sole companion of the widow, save her brother, Thomas W. Hay, who is more than eighty years old. The Thomas family, who have been connected with the Alexander family for generations, are in the hope that she might throw some light on the thefts or give some clue to the investigation. In her statement offered no theories. The detective is reported to have declared that in his opinion the colored woman is not implicated in the case.

When the case reaches the grand jury both factions in the family feud will be summoned to appear. The case is now pending in the hope that it might throw some light on the thefts or give some clue to the investigation. In her statement offered no theories. The detective is reported to have declared that in his opinion the colored woman is not implicated in the case.

EASY MARRIAGES CAUSE DIVORCES
Lack of Education Is a Factor, Too, Says English Author.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—"Make marriage, not divorce, more difficult, the latter question will be solved. Easy marriage and a lack of education is the real cause of most domestic troubles," said Mrs. Hugo Ames, the English authoress today.

"Divorce is too easy to obtain in the United States, and too hard to obtain in England," she continued. "The result is that in both countries, there is contempt for the marriage vows. Fidelity is the marriage bond of God and no marriage exists where either the man or the woman is unfaithful."

The lowest class of women can do to marry for a home, and the thought of the number of women who do it both in this country and in England, is sickening.

"English noblemen are not noblemen when they marry American girls for their dollars, but when they marry the girls who sell themselves. But to remedy existing causes we must first educate the children. Education and that alone, will cure the divorce evil."

Crew of Wrecked Ship Brought Into Port
OSWEGO, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Capt. George Longley, of Ogdensburg, and twenty members of the crew of the wrecked steamer John Sharples, including one woman, were brought into port today on the steamer Hinckley.

The Sharples is thirty miles north of Oswego. The Sharples struck in a heavy snowstorm Friday morning and was rapidly going to pieces when the Hinckley was hailed. The abandoned body was bound from Chicago to Ogdensburg.

Dye Works Destroyed; Blaze Is Spectacular
BALTIMORE, Dec. 10.—Fire this morning practically destroyed the plant of the Maryland Bleach and Dye Works, located in the heart of the factory district in southeast Baltimore, causing a loss estimated at $350,000. The fire was most spectacular, and despite the fact that the weather was clear, thousands of spectators watched the firemen at their work.

Uniformed Policeman Drops Out of Sight.
NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—A policeman in full uniform, has been missing from the New York force since the chauffeur's strike, in which he did special duty, and a general alarm has been sent out in the hope that he may be found. He is James J. Judge, of 263 East Twenty-seventh street. A week ago Judge turned in his wages to his wife. She has not heard of him since.

CHARLTON BEGINS FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

Writs Issued Preventing for Present His Being Returned to Italy.

treaty, she broke the treaty, and it is now as though it never existed. The extradition must be according to law, and neither the President nor the Secretary of State can make a treaty. "Congress has the power, and the Secretary's statement that, despite Italy's action in ignoring the treaty, he would observe its terms, shows he is taking on his shoulders power he does not enjoy."

"We also plan to prove to the Federal court that our client is insane. If the court here decides against us, we will appeal to the Supreme Court. We intend to make a hard fight to keep our client from being turned over to the Italian authorities."

Much Surprise Is Felt In Official Circles

Great surprise is expressed in official circles here today at the action of Secretary Knox in ordering Porter Charlton, who had confessed to the murder of his wife at Lake Como, Italy, turned over to the Italian authorities for extradition to Italy to face trial.

It had been expected that Secretary Knox would refuse to grant the request for Charlton's extradition, even though it had been honored by the magistrate at Hoboken, N. Y. This expectation prevalent among officials of the State Department, was based on the repeated refusals of Italy to surrender Italian citizens who had fled to their native land to escape arrest in the United States.

Precedent Established. Thus a precedent is established by the opinion of Secretary Knox, in which he rules that Charlton should be surrendered. The Secretary holds that by the terms of the extradition treaty the United States is obligated to surrender Americans regardless of the refusal to redemptive under like circumstances. The point raised by Italian officials, upon which they deny extradition of native-born sons who seek Italy as an asylum in the interpretation of the word "persons," it is agreed in the extradition treaty that persons resident in one country, and sought as fugitives from justice by the other nation, shall be surrendered to the authorities of the country seeking his punishment. In interpreting this clause, Italians hold that the word "persons" does not include their own citizens of the United States, by the opinion of Secretary Knox in the Charlton case, hold that "persons" applied to citizens of the United States.

Opportunity Open. In the ordinary course of events, Charlton would be at once delivered from the New Jersey jail, where he now is, to the Italian consular authorities for removal to Italy. If convicted there, the severest punishment which could be inflicted upon him is life imprisonment, as Italy has abolished capital punishment.

However, Secretary Knox holds out an opportunity for at least a stay of execution in the case of Charlton, and it is for the courts to decide on the merits of the case and the legal points involved. In the case of Charlton, the habeas corpus proceedings are entered. Also, the Secretary declares the State Department has nothing to do with the question of Charlton's sanity.

Alleged Counterfeiter Remanded To Tombs

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—After deliberating for twenty hours, a jury before Judge Holt, in the criminal branch of the United States court, today found Giuseppe Boscarino, an alleged member of the noted Lupo-Morelli counterfeiting gang, guilty of dealing in money. He was remanded to the Tombs in the custody of United States Marshal Henkle until Monday for sentence.

In the case of Dominick Malone, jointly tried with Boscarino, the jury disagreed, and Judge Holt remanded him to the Tombs in $2,500 bail to await a new trial.

PERKINS DEVOTE THE TO INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS

Financier Severs His Connection With J. P. Morgan & Co.

HOPEFUL OF MAKING CONDITIONS BETTER

Retirement and Avowed Reason Causes Much Comment on Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—All Wall Street today discussed the retirement of George W. Perkins from the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.—not so much his retirement, as the avowed object of it.

The announcement that Mr. Perkins intends devoting his time to improving conditions between capital and labor has aroused the greatest interest among financiers. The possibility of his succeeding to a vacant trusteeship in the Equitable Life is but little discussed in comparison.

According to the most reliable information, Mr. Perkins proposes to carry further the work which he did for the betterment of the relations between employers and employees, through the establishment of the profit-sharing plan of the United States Steel Corporation and of other industrial concerns in which he has been a prominent figure in the ten years of his connection with the Morgan banking house.

Many Theories Advanced. Just how and along what lines he intends to continue this work is what is puzzling Wall Street, and innumerable theories are being advanced. There is no indication of a let-up in the speculation until Mr. Perkins himself puts an end to it by announcing the plan he purposes to pursue.

One other retirement from the Morgan firm was announced yesterday—that of Edward F. Whitney.

Mr. Whitney had been associated with the house for many years, and was its foreign exchange operations, and had been a partner in the firm since 1900. The two new members of the firm, who will succeed Mr. Perkins and Mr. Whitney, it is announced, are Thomas W. Lamont and William H. Porter.

Firm's Announcement. This announcement of the changes was made by the firm. An announcement is made by Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. that Edward F. Whitney and George W. Perkins will retire from the firm on January 1, 1911, and that William H. Porter, president of the Chemical National Bank, and Thomas W. Lamont, vice president of the same bank, will become partners in the firm.

Mr. Whitney withdraws as he desires to retire from active business. Mr. Perkins withdraws from the firm in order to devote himself to corporate work and to work of public nature which require more time and attention than it would be possible for him to give while remaining in the firm.

Mr. Perkins himself supplemented this statement with this explanation of his reasons for withdrawing from the banking house in which he has been a very active figure ever since he became a partner in 1901.

In January I will have been in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. ten years and engaged in business activities over thirty years. I am now withdrawing from the firm for the purpose, as the firm's announcement states, of devoting more time to corporate work and to work of public nature in which I am deeply interested.

In continuing my relations with the industrial and other business organizations with which I am connected I hope to find further opportunities for the kind of work which I regard as a practical solution of some of the difficulties existing between capital and labor.

At Columbia University two years ago and at Harvard University last spring I spoke of the importance of solving the new problems at present facing the country, and which have great co-operative combinations of capital, and it is my hope that the experience I have had may enable me to contribute something toward the adjustment of these matters, which seem to me to be the largest consequence of the country.

Insurance Experience. Mr. Perkins went to J. P. Morgan & Co. from the New York Life Insurance Company, where he was in charge of the company's agency force, which he organized along new lines. When the investigation into the life insurance companies was made in 1906, Mr. Perkins was one of the principal witnesses called, and his testimony on the stand in that investigation included something of his own career during the years when he was building up the reputation with the New York Life Insurance Company, which finally brought him the offer of a place in the banking house headed by J. P. Morgan, the admitted leader of finance in this country.

Mr. Perkins has given practical application to his ideas about bringing labor and capital together, and the profit-sharing and pension plans of the United States Steel Corporation and of the International Harvester Company, in both of which, ever since their organization, Mr. Perkins has been one of the active directors and officers.

These steps, as he himself described them, were by way of "humanizing" the corporations. In this matter he has taken the stand that co-operation in business having taken the place of ruthless competition, it is necessary to have a change in the way of doing business. He believes that the new era of business should be better for the laborer as well as for the employer and the consumer.

Other Connections. In withdrawing from the banking house of Morgan & Co. Mr. Perkins does not sever his connection with the many corporations with which he is associated. He will retain his directorships in all of them and will undertake in a still broader field to carry forward his plans.

Mr. Perkins has been one of the planks in the platform upon which Mr. Perkins undertakes his self-imposed task of

GEORGE W. PERKINS.

Views in Brief on Business and Politics

By GEORGE W. PERKINS.

Let those of us who are in business be fair with the people and the people will be fair with us.

If we believe that in our republic, the people's word is law, let us believe it in all things.

Politics has fought business and business has fought politics until both have been sorely wounded.

Giant corporations would be a public benefit, not a menace, if managed under laws that would compel proper publicity and punish officers for improper methods.

Establishing a feeling of friendly co-operation in the place of the mistrust which so often shows itself in the relations of capital and labor.

The best of us, Mr. Perkins said, who are in business by fair means, with the people and the people will be fair with us; let us see and accept the tendency of the times, let us recognize our responsibilities, and our problems will be far easier of solution. If we believe that in our republic the people's word is law, let us believe it in all things, and if the people have decided that the time has come to take a hand in how business shall be conducted, is it not plain business sense to meet the question at least half way rather than fight it all the way?

Politics has fought business and business has fought politics until both have been sorely wounded, and in the general scrimmage the punishment has had a pretty hard time, and under the circumstances has been long suffering and patient.

"Giant corporations," Mr. Perkins has also said, "would be, not a menace, but a great public benefit if managed under laws that would compel proper publicity and punish officers for improper methods."

Mr. Perkins has given practical application to his ideas about bringing labor and capital together, and the profit-sharing and pension plans of the United States Steel Corporation and of the International Harvester Company, in both of which, ever since their organization, Mr. Perkins has been one of the active directors and officers.

PAPER SALE OF FARMING TOOLS

Hitchcock Presents Evidence Showing That Indians' Purchases Are Restricted.

It is not unlikely that Secretary Ballinger will be called upon to make an investigation of orders being issued by superintendents of Indian agencies restricting Indians in their purchases of farming implements so that they are required to buy from the Harvester trust instead of from independent manufacturers.

Representative Hitchcock, of Nebraska, has produced a copy of a letter sent out by J. A. Wood, superintendent of the Rosebud Indian Agency, in South Dakota, and circulated among the Indians. The letter reads:

"In view of the difficulty which is experienced in obtaining repairs for farm implements manufactured by small and oftentimes irresponsible concerns, it is directed that hereafter no Indians be allowed to purchase any other than standard farming implements, such as the McCormick John Deere, etc. Please see that these instructions are carried out."

"S. McCormick mowers and rakes are preferred in all cases."

Several members of the House have expressed the opinion that the circulation of such a letter is evidence of a disposition to favor trust manufactured articles to the disadvantage of independent manufacturers, and it is considered likely that Secretary Ballinger will be asked to investigate the matter.

LAKE STEAMER GOING TO PIECES

Sharpless' Crew Suffers Greatly—Without Food Thirty Hours.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The Wolvline lake steamer John Sharpless, of St. Catharines, Ontario, is pounding to pieces today on one of the Gullough Islands, thirty miles from here. Her crew of twenty men, together with two women, have been landed here in an exhausted condition.

The vessel, with 25,000 bushels of corn, was en route from Chicago to Prescott, Ontario, when she went ashore Thursday morning. All the life boats save one were smashed, but with the remaining boat half the crew, with Mrs. F. P. Russell, of Ogdensburg, wife of the chief engineer, succeeded in reaching the Gullough Island lighthouse, where they spent thirty hours without food.

The other half of the crew, together with Mrs. Susan Ross, the stewardess, remained on the vessel, suffering a terribly. The water soon extinguished the boiler fires, and the crew, wet and cold, had no way to prepare food. For five hours Mrs. Ross was lashed to the deck, covered with a cloth, while waves beat over her. She was unconscious when rescued.

The portion of the crew, which reached the lighthouse, burned signals of distress, which were seen by the government vessel Hinckley, which was picking up the crew. All were rescued and brought here.
